“ So sorry for your loss. Arlene was such a loving spirit. We enjoyed many many good times when we worked and lived together in California in our much younger days.

Words cannot express my sadness over your loss. Your Mom has joined your Dad in heaven. I will never forget them. Their strength and goodness will continue to live on through you. Take care and God bless you.

“ I lost a dear friend the other day when Arlene lost her fight with lung infections from a transplant. We met when I was 20 and lived together for 4 years in Chicago. We had so much fun and loved each other like a sister. Of course, life got in the way, and tired of the cold, I transferred to Miami. Although, we were far apart, we kept in touch. Through, marriages and eventually when our children came along, we visited quite a bit with toddlers in tow. A boy, Chris for her, and Lindsay, for me. Time passed and as our lives became busier, we didn't keep in touch as we should have. Our Children grew up and the years flew by without us picking up the phone or writing an email. In 1999, Ar's husband died and I went to the funeral. I wanted to really talk with her but she was devastated and all I could do was hug her. Two summers ago, she called me because her son had moved to Indiana and she was going to drive to see him. I was back in Louisville at the time and she said we could meet halfway from Indianapolis to Louisville and have lunch. She didn't tell me then how sick she was but just never called me back. We never met for lunch. How I regret that. We always think we have more time. Keep your family and friends close and don't pass up a chance to laugh with them, or hug them or just call and remind them that you love them. The one thing we don't have in life is time.
