“ My Best Man. We are 5 days apart in age. Many would look at us and couldn't figure out what we had in common. I am a sports fanatic. I collected baseball cards, you collected beer cans. You loved everything about cars. Don't think I ever told my parents about being in your car for a drag race near Maine South. You won. You telling me I'm making you look bad because I loved math and would do extra problems. But we did have a lot in common. Both sarcastic as hell. We found humor in almost everyone we met. We were pinball fanatics. We both had a strong interest in the opposite sex! We both found the loves of our life after a handful of mistakes! We both love are children with every fiber of our beings. Remember our 16-18 hour day picking up our kids from Iowa State to try (we failed) to beat a blizzard? We both know family is the most important part of life. I admired you taking on adulthood way sooner than most of us when your dad died when you were 16. Being dedicated to your mom when she made that a difficult task. You are a good man and will be sorely missed.
