“ I remember the day that you left us for your adopted country, flying the BOAC flag in your best suit and a bowler hat to boot! All optimism and happy to begin a new life with Joan. You both worked hard and had two wonderful young men and now three wonderful grandchildren. Thank you for making our first trip to Chicago such a brilliant experience and as a tour guide you were unsurpassed, even if we did lose sight of the Sears Tower, as it was called then! Thank you for the good times, we will raise a glass of fine ale and salute one of Buckinghamshire's sons. Peace be with you.
Our condolences to all the family

“ Rest In Peace Douglas. I will miss you and some fascinating conversations we had. Your knowledge of all sorts of trivia was amazing; and once I married Robert Taylor, you had a fast friend with whom to talk and attend military shows and reenactment events. I hope you and Bob can reconnect in the great beyond. Your sister-in-law Nancy Chatfield-Taylor

“ I found this photo of Doug when you all visited us here in England back in the 70's (note my hair perm, very Brian May) & Doug insisted on putting a knotted handkerchief on his head - I'm English I still don't know where that old idea came from! We had good memories of Doug's hospitality along with all the Hinrich family. As I posted on Facebook John often tells the tale of when we were visiting in 1980 and you took us to the 4th of July parade and Doug gave John a Union Jack teeshirt to wear - Won't i get some flack says John, Nay says Doug " I just say if it wasn't for us Brits you would be at work today" ... and we left our pot of marmite behind for him. RIP Doug, Sad day but today is the day we remember the fun times.

Our condolences to you all

“ It is good to know that Douglas is at peace, as he was very ill. Having been his wife for twenty-six years, I knew him well. He loved England and during our time together we went back to visit about every two years, facilitated by running student trips to England. He wanted his sons to know England and their grandparents. This was accomplished. Douglas had a passion for reading and history, and was an excellent cook. He will be missed. Joan Caton
