“ What fond memories of his knowledge, compassion, and integrity I have for this man among men and his kind and loving wife, Karen. My condolences and my gratitude in great abundance goes out to his family and those that loved him as I did. In my time of need, he and Karen were both there to bolster me and guide me. I have found what they have and praise my God and their God for it.

“ To my beloved brother, Greg. Words can't explain our sadness, but as exquisite as our pain is, so too is our joy in knowing that we are eternally united as a forever family. Til we meet at Jesus' feet.

“ Greg, What wonderful memories I have of our days at University High School and as roommates at Washington State University. Even though we have not communicated through the years, you were never forgotten. You've now reached your heavenly home and I know that we will be united again in the not too distant future.

“ Sister Oldham, I'm so sorry to hear of your loss. Right now "together forever" seems a long time from now, but I know that he is supporting you from the other side of the veil and will be until you are together again. May you be greatly blessed on this new journey you are embarking on. Cheli Ferguson
