“ When I first began to drive my dad took me in my grandmas Toyota echo out and about in Tulsa. To say the least I was extremely nervous. It wasnt until about 10 minutes in where things went extra crazy due to construction and ended up driving on the highway. I remember either saying or thinking I was never going to drive with him ever again. To say the least just recently he got comfortable with my driving skills... when he learned to just trust me and not try to tell me what to do. Advice: Never lead your unlicensed child onto a highway. Especially in Tulsa. I never let him love it down either. Haha.

“ This was the last picture I had with him. He was my daddy, and I love him so much. We knew how to make each other smile. I already miss you so so much, and wish you had never left. I am heartbroken.
