“ I was sorry to hear the news from my friend Molly about Lou's passing. Lou was a very nice man with many talents and he was adored by my friend. Lou spoke fondly of his family and I hope his family is doing well during this difficult time.

“ Russ, Rod, Polly, Reed, Janie, Jill, June and All, It's been many years since we have been in contact and many years before that since we were close neighbors, but I remember your dad fondly. Except for those few time Russ, I helped you and your dad supply drywall for houses you were constructing. Man, that was a killer! Your dad was kind, gentle and probably showed me greater interest than the fathers of any of my other friends. Not to give Hilary Clinton much credit with It Takes a Village but your dad was a part of my village. Our fathers who made up the male part of the greatest generation have for the most part have moved in with the Lord. I am sorry for your loss but I am grateful for knowing your dad. I hope you are all well. Peace be with you all. Kip Travis

“ I never met Lou (I have the sense that he wouldn't mind me calling him by his first name) but know him through the stories June has shared with me (especially his inventions, pickling everything in sight, and their trips to Vegas). I hope that your good memories of your dad, grandfather, and great grandfather, carry you through as time goes by. Peace

“ Fondest childhood memories of spending time with the Cook's. Heartfelt condolences and much love to the entire family. I truly enjoyed reading the book Lou wrote. I'm sure the reunion with Peggy and Mom was wonderful.
