“ In the days before e-mail was prevalent, Selby sent a map to me via fax. I sent it back after noting he had made a mistake in orienting the map with respect to "North". Later, I was looking at the map, and realized he had indeed correctly oriented it. I called to correct my mistake, and he laughed. I asked why he was laughing, and he said, "The first thing any pilot or sailor learns is how to find North under any circumstance." His gentle but firm leadership, as well as his humor, will be missed.
