“ When Sharon's daughter Annie was a Sr. in HS, I fueled her interest in joining the military. I worked at the time with Sharon, who was a sweet wonderful docile person. I was afraid Sharon would be so mad at me for encouraging her daughter's courageous yet dangerous aspirations. Through jump school, service in Bosnia and all Annie's adventures, Sharon just beamed with such pride. Oh yes, also, Sharon was very smart and would chuckle at some of my grammatical errors. She once framed a post-it I left her which read "please send certified male." Well, it may not have been what I intended but heck, you can't argue with that. Rest in peace my friend!!
